JENNIFER DEVOLL REFLECTS ON

20 YEARS OF GUIDING PCF'S GROWTH & IMPACT

“It’s been an honor to guide PCF’s phenomenal evolution as PCF’s President and CEO for 20 years. When I arrived at PCF in 2002, I inherited 50 years of strong stewardship. Since then, my efforts have centered on building visibility and organizational capacity, strengthening community trust, and deepening people’s understanding of the role of a community foundation. Looking back, I recognize that PCF has grown in three important ways during my tenure, each significantly fueling PCF’s local impact.”

Two recent gifts will have far-reaching impact on PCF’s capacity to address community issues and build on a long history of engaging with our community’s generosity.

The Margie and Robert E. Petersen Scholarship Endowment for Transition Age Foster Youth

The $10 million gift from the Petersen Foundation in November 2021 established the Margie and Robert E. Petersen Scholarship Endowment for Transition Age Foster Youth and is the largest single gift in PCF’s history. It will be used to create the Peterson Scholars Program for foster youth attending community colleges in the Pasadena and Los Angeles region.

The Doris Gilbert Sloan Bequest

In early 2020, PCF received the largest bequest in its history: a $3.4 million gift from the estate of Doris Gilbert Sloan. The bequest established two endowments that reflect her passions: The Gilbert Family Endowment for Education and the Gilbert Family Endowment for Animals. The latter allowed PCF to create its new Animal Welfare Grant Program, which designates support for domestic animals and wildlife.

“The Foundation’s long-standing reputation encourages our generous community to continually invest in our mission, fuel our growth, and subsequently expand our capacity to serve local nonprofits with renewable annual support.”

2 Grant Programs

Since 2002, PCF has expanded from a singular focus on Capital Grants to multiple grant programs, including K-12 Education, Senior Grants, and Animal Welfare. PCF has also taken a lead in recognizing current issues impacting our community and in response, created focused grant initiatives like the Affordable Housing Initiative, PCF Scholars, and the COVID-19 Relief Fund.

3 Community Collaboration

PCF received PUSD's 2021 Superintendent's Award in recognition of PCF's broad support of the district's families during the pandemic. Pictured: Jennifer DeVoll and PUSD Superintendent Brian McDonald.

PCF has placed increasing focus on collaboration and partnerships in recent years, and the COVID-19 pandemic accelerated PCF's engagement with local organizations and the City of Pasadena.

- Administered the City of Pasadena's two COVID-19 Small Business Grant Programs, which ultimately awarded nearly $1 million in grants to 98 Pasadena-area small businesses.
- Funded several community vaccines clinics in partnership with the Pasadena Public Health Department, Huntington Memorial Hospital, and local agencies like NAACP and Harambee Ministries.
- Partnered with Pasadena Unified School District (PUSD) to disperse numerous new grants and repurpose existing grants to ensure that vulnerable families had the supplies and support they needed.

“Our recent collaborations with partner organizations and the City of Pasadena have led PCF to become nimbler and more responsive to emerging needs. These relationships have helped us appreciate the power of collective impact.”

CLAIMING THEIR SPACES

RACIAL EQUITY INITIATIVE HELPS STUDENTS ENGAGE IN THEIR EDUCATION AND THEIR FUTURE

In early 2021, PCF invited Pasadena-area community leaders who are deeply invested in issues surrounding racial equity to join its Diversity, Equity & Inclusion (DEI) Task Force with the goal of creating guidelines for PCF's new Racial Equity Initiative. The group ultimately chose to fund local programs that strengthen educational opportunities for local Black and Latinx students. In November 2021, 10 organizations received awards in recognition of their focus and success in engaging families in academic interventions, addressing achievement gaps, and providing educational interventions, and vocational and job readiness training.

“The DEI Task Force’s process highlighted that educational disparities are often at the root of social problems and that early intervention can have lasting impacts.”

(OBA) was founded in 1962 in Northwest Pasadena to offer underserved youth the opportunity to get outdoors, have access to environmental education and leadership development, and prepare for careers in conservation. Historically, not everyone has been welcomed in America’s Great Outdoors, and extensive research demonstrates a deep inequality in those who manage and visit the nation’s public lands. Through a wide range of programs and opportunities at its John Muir High School location, OBA promotes diversity and inclusion in the outdoor world and employment within environmental and conservation sectors.

Executive Director Charles Thomas sees transformational aspects of OBA’s mission. “Our kids learn to be more comfortable with who they are. Going into the wilderness for several days or weeks at a time strips you down to your fundamental elements.” He also recognizes that OBA participants often develop a better sense of hope about climate change. “They see that they can take an active role in, for example, preserving animal habitats and that makes a difference. They are enfranchised into a world they’ve never been asked to participate in, which expands their horizons and gives them a sense of purpose.” One measure of OBA’s OBA will use its Racial Equity Grant to grow its Youth Advisory Council (YAC). Among their many roles, YAC members plan impressive, weeks-long summer expedition trips, like this backpack excursion to the High Sierras.

transformational impact stands out particularly for him: 93% of the organization’s participants continue to spend time in nature, even after their time with OBA ends. “Our youth are finding their place outdoors and adopting it as part of their lifestyle. They see themselves as hikers and outdoor enthusiasts. They initiate outdoor activity.”

“What’s really important here is that youth from communities of color, who have been historically absent from this work, are building their outdoor pedigree. These kids are pioneers.”

— Charles Thomas, OBA Executive Director

STEAM:CODERS works to bridge the persistent nationwide digital divide that impacts students of color by engaging local PUSD students in STEAM (science, technology, engineering, art and math) subjects and related professions like computer science, coding, cybersecurity, robotics, 3D printing, and video game development. “We lead with fun and when they’re not paying attention, we sneak in some education,” laughs Ray Ealy, the organization’s founder and executive director. “We focus on things kids can relate to – they love technology, and they love figuring things out.”

STEAM:CODERS also focuses on empowerment. By exposing students to professionals who look like them and come from similar backgrounds, STEAM:CODERS also shows students that they belong in STEAM learning spaces and have what it takes to pursue STEAM careers. “For a majority of our kids, if they decide to go to college, they’re the first in the family to do so. They don’t see themselves reflected in many industries, so part of our model is to bring in speakers from various professions who are also from communities of color. You have to create that ‘it’s possible moment’ and let them hear these professionals’ back stories, how college helped them get to where they are now.”

STEAM:CODERS will use its Racial Equity Grant to strengthen its math programs for all ages, introduce coding to Washington Elementary classrooms, and build capacity to serve more students.

“We live in an area with world-class institutions like JPL, Caltech, and ArtCenter, but students of color often cannot see themselves in those spaces. Our goal is to show these kids that they belong in STEAM learning spaces and have what it takes to pursue STEAM careers. The empowering piece is important to us.” — Ray Ealy, Executive Director

THE ARLYNE W. HUSTED ENDOWMENT

A MULTI-INTEREST ENDOWMENT SERVES AS AN EFFECTIVE ALTERNATIVE TO CREATING A PRIVATE FOUNDATION

In September 2021, the Arlyne W. Husted Endowment was established from the estate of Arlyne White Husted. She dedicated a significant portion of her estate to charitable purposes, Arlyne's endowment showcases the flexibility that PCF has in implementing a donor's wishes.

specifically to support five causes dear to her heart. Her unique endowment with PCF will support one of five areas of interest each year by rotation: Children and Youth, Care and Protection of Animals, Promotion of the Arts, Support for Education, and Historic Preservation in the Pasadena area. Her endowment showcases the flexibility that PCF has in implementing a donor's wishes.

Arlyne grew up in Beverly Hills. She attended the Brillantmont Ecole in Switzerland and continued her studies at UCLA. In 1957, she married George William Husted, a fellow Angeleno and professional baseball player. They welcomed daughter Ann Elizabeth several years later. In the mid-1970s, George and Arlyne moved to San Marino, where they lived for the rest of their lives. Preceded in death by her husband and her daughter, Arlyne died in 2019 at the age of 91. She is remembered for her sharp mind, loyal attachments, and as a good, kind, and generous friend.

Trust Attorney Works with PCF to Best Serve Client's Wishes

Cynthia Pearson, Trusts & Estates attorney, Overton, Lyman & Prince LLP

IN HER TRUST, Ms. Husted left instructions to create a private founding with the residue of her estate, but the amount remaining was not enough to accomplish her wishes effectively. Her trust attorney, Cynthia Pearson, reached out to PCF about finding an efficient alternative to a private foundation that would still carry out Ms. Husted's goals. Ms. Pearson subsequently received court approval to work with the Foundation to create an endowment benefiting the five causes designated in the Husted Trust.

“One of the things I am most proud of while at PCF is stewarding the Foundation's Legacy Society to ensure that future bequests benefit future generations.”

— Jennifer DeVoll

THE POWER OF Endowments

A PERMANENT AND EVER-INCREASING SOURCE OF FINANCIAL SUPPORT TO SHAPE THE FUTURE

SHRIVASTAVA FAMILY ENDOWMENT

A COUPLE TARGETS LOCAL COMMUNITY & ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
WITH THEIR ENDOWMENT

Uma Shrivastava is proud of her long career as a financial services executive and as an award-winning owner of La Cañada Books and Toys. A native of India, she arrived in the United States in 1965 and moved to Pasadena in 1989 with her husband, Dr. Prakash Shrivastava, a USC Keck School of Medicine Professor Emeritus of Radiation Oncology.

Uma shines when she discusses her tenure with Women at Work (WAW), a nonprofit organization that started in the late 1970s to help women gain job and career development training. During her more than 20 years' participation with WAW, she held numerous leadership roles, experience that strengthened her belief that women should have careers and be given the opportunity to earn their fullest potential.

Prakash is a long-time member of the Rotary Club and lends his medical expertise to projects here and in India. The couple helped establish a hospital in their native country, and Prakash currently spends his days working closely with a group in India to create prostheses with 3D printing.

In 2021, Uma and Prakash established the Shrivastava Family Endowment, the first endowment designated to PCF's recently created Community & Economic Development field of interest. "I have always believed that when a woman is able to stand on her own two feet, it helps the whole family," Uma says emphatically. "When you talk to people in my generation, so many of them have taken classes with WAW. I wanted our endowment to be a legacy to the women who founded WAW and participated in the organization. We appreciate knowing that people in our local work sector will benefit from our gift."

As Women at Work was preparing to sunset its operations in 2016, Uma was instrumental in establishing the Women at Work Endowment at PCF, which supports women with challenging circumstances achieve sustainable employment. (WAW archive photo)

"We are proud that our PCF endowment will continue to support women's rights in the employment sector to realize their full earning and career potential."

— Uma Shrivastava

PCF ENDOWMENT BUILDERS

In 1953, Louis Webb created the Pasadena Foundation, and he and his wife Marion named the Foundation as the beneficiary of their estate — an eventual gift of $2.3 million. Today, that amount has grown to nearly $16 million, serving as a powerful engine for charitable impact.

In 2021 alone, PCF donors contributed $2.47 million into PCF Endowment Builder Funds — perpetual gifts, like that of the Webbs, that will benefit our community for generations to come.

The “forever gifts” established by Pasadena Community Foundation’s Endowment Builders provide vital support to local nonprofits. They enable PCF to make versatile grants to long-standing agencies and new organizations, as well as meet urgent needs when they arise, such as COVID-19 relief funding.

THREE EASY STEPS TO BECOME A PCF ENDOWMENT BUILDER:

1. Pick your passion

Designate your investment to one or more of PCF’s areas of interest: Arts & Culture, Community & Economic Development, Environment & Animal Welfare, Health & Safety, Human Services, and Youth & Education. Or, create an unrestricted endowment to provide flexible support for PCF’s grantmaking.

2. Name your endowment

Memorialize a loved one who has passed, mark an important milestone, or create an endowment to “pay it forward.”

3. Make your gift

Establish your fund during your lifetime or through your estate plan. It takes just $10,000 to start an endowment with PCF (or two payments of $5,000 over two years).

In 2021 PCF’s 140 Endowment Builders generated $1.2 million in grant funds, supporting:

- 100 local nonprofits
- Scholarships to 50 students
- Mobile vaccine clinics targeting hard-to-reach, hesitant populations
- Pandemic relief funding to 14 arts organizations
- New Racial Equity and Animal Welfare Programs

FRIENDS & FELLOWS

We are pleased to recognize those donors who made a contribution to support PCF's local grantmaking in 2021. Donors recognized below made contributions to PCF's Friends & Fellows Fund, PCF Scholars, the COVID-19 Small Business Relief Fund, PCF's COVID-19 Response Fund, and/or to Endowment Builder funds that generate ongoing funding for local nonprofits.

PCF WELCOMES JEANNINE BOGAARD

Jeannine Bogaard has joined PCF as Senior Program Manager. She recently returned to Pasadena, her hometown, after spending the last six years as the Director of the American School of Las Palmas in the Canary Islands. Jeannine attended Pasadena's Blair High School, and after graduating from the University of California San Diego, she moved to Spain to learn Spanish and teach English. After nine years in the classroom, she spent 20 years in educational publishing, including managing the editorial, production, and manufacturing teams at Cambridge University Press.

Jeannine brings her outstanding leadership skills and professional expertise in project management, team building, and student success to PCF's Grant Program team. NATIVE MILKWEEDS TO THE RESCUE

ARROYOS & FOOTHILLS CONSERVANCY'S MONARCH RECOVERY PROJECT

PCF debuted its Animal Welfare Grant Program in 2021, which supports organizations serving domestic animals and wildlife. Arroyos and Foothills Conservancy (AFC) was awarded funding for its San Gabriel Foothills Monarch Recovery Project, a comprehensive public project to plant native milkweed in foothill communities, on AFC-owned properties, and on the properties of conservation partners.

Native milkweeds are monarch butterflies' sole habitat, serving both as a place to lay their eggs and as food for newly hatched caterpillars. As the plants rapidly disappear due to development, agricultural practices, and herbicides, the butterflies are endangered.

PCF's grant helped AFC purchase native milkweed plants and seeds for an intensive planting process and five "adoption" events in October and November. Nearly 300 people became proud participants in the Monarch Recovery Program, adopting 835 Asclepius fascicularis (Narrow-Leaf Milkweed) or Asclepius eriocarpa (Woolly-Pod Milkweed) to plant in their own yards.

A local resident adopts three native milkweed plants during an AFC workshop in October 2021.

A critical part of the Monarch Recovery Project is tracking the location, health, and survival of native milkweed plants after adoption. Plants will be tracked by scientists to see where the milkweed has been planted, how much has survived, and how that impacts monarch populations.
