

Additional Information of Importance to de Karman Fellowship Applicants

Updated August 2024

1. PhD students who are not citizens of the United States may still apply for a Josephine de Karman Fellowship if they are already enrolled in one of the California universities listed above.
2. The fellowships will be paid directly through the fellowship office of the university in which the successful candidate is enrolled for study in the United States. One half will be paid in September and one half the following February.

Important note: No university overhead may be applied to the Fellowship Award. University financial support is viewed as separate from de Karman Fellowship support. The de Karman Fellowship is for merit, based on a statewide competition. Therefore, it is hoped that ongoing university support commitments are maintained while a de Karman Fellowship is held.

3. The names, universities, and departments (and dissertation titles) of Josephine de Karman Fellowship awardees may be published on the Pasadena Community Foundation website.
4. By the end of October following completion of their fellowship year, awardees ARE REQUIRED to submit an abstract of their dissertation and a one- or two-page report on their achievements as a result of having held a Josephine de Karman Fellowship. The report should include a brief breakdown of how funds were utilized.
